

Happy families at the Hyatt enjoy classic Christmas dishes in the Ruinas Del Mar

For those that wish to make their holiday celebration extra special, or just any Sunday brunch, the place of choice is usually the amazing gourmet buffet put on by Ruinas Del Mar restaurant in the Hyatt Regency Resort. This is where Mike and Heather Fineberg of Toms River, New Jersey chose to spend the evening with their three children, Randi, Halli and Micky. Mother and daughters were all a vision in matching sparkling crystal headbands, beautifully dressed up for the festive day. Aruba has also been their place to be for Christmas for the last four consecutive years, and Mike confessed they couldn't think of coming anywhere else.

Additionally returning for their twelfth visit in four years was the Gabri family of Washington, D.C., who has made it a practice to come to Aruba three times a year since their first vacation on the island. This year, Prakash and his wife Kathleen were joined by their son Justin, and their "surrogate son" Anthony Russo for a lovely Christmas dinner at the Hyatt. The warmth and friendliness of this couple is such that by the end of the meal they had two new members of the family, their servers. Kathleen expressed a particular rapport with Janet "because she is so hip" and Tulio, who is so friendly and jolly.

This Christmas dinner was exceptionally special for Rachael and Hung Trieu of Chicago, because it was also a long-awaited honeymoon, and "our first Christmas dinner together" revealed Rachael. They find everything about Aruba absolutely wonderful, and both deem it a 'honeymoon to remember, always.'

The Hyatt Regency buffet, with the various carving stations, fresh tossed pasta, and custom made pizza, aside from a vast selection of gourmet delights made it a fabulously festive Christmas dinner for quite a few!
